PROFILE

As a self-educated developer I have reached a point where I understood that I needed to join a team of experienced developers to improve my skills and knowledge of web design technologies by participating in development of innovative solutions. Supervised by a couple of experienced developers I was using online resources like Treehouse, Code School and Pluralsight to learn about front-end web development. Experience in development of my own portfolio website (www.pavlostatkevych.com) and other attached to it websites (www.pavlostatkevych.com/portfolio.html), gives me confidence that I can manage required tasks and I am ready for any challenges. Self-organization helps me to use my time effectively and my focus and persistence helps me to finish what I start. My experience in sales and management will help me to organize myself, quickly join a project and figure out necessary business processes to implement a particular product. Many years of experience in working with people made me stress resistant and prepared to work under pressure and peacefully resolve conflict situations. I respect other people's values and visions, communicable, honest and joyful so hope to become a good member of a team. I value high quality work, creative ideas and innovations and people who desire to improve and develop new technologies.
